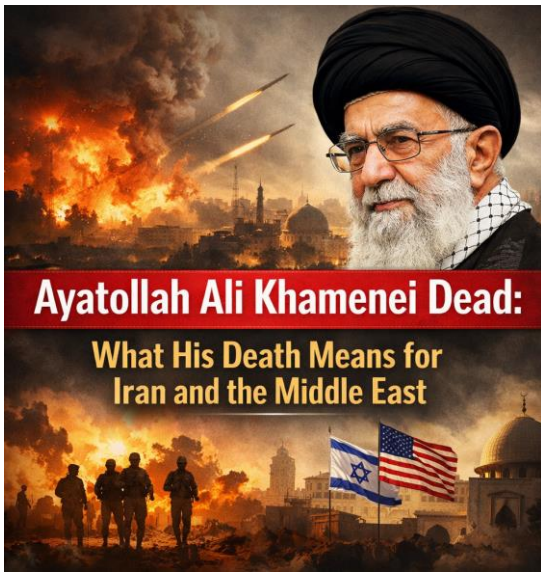
END OF AN ERA

Khamenei's Death Sparks Uncertainty in Iran



Death of Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei marks a dramatic shift in Middle Eastern politics. His death creates uncertainty over Iran's leadership and regional stability.

Khamenei rose to power in 1989. He combined political, military and religious authority. He shaped Iran's domestic policies and foreign strategy. He strengthened IRGC, promoted resistance economy and supported allied militias across the region. Critics cite authoritarianism and economic mismanagement. Supporters praised his defense of Iran's sovereignty.

The strike also targeted top clerical and military leaders. It left Iran to rely on a temporary three-member council. Analysts warn of potential power struggles as factions vie to choose a permanent successor. This may intensify internal conflict.

Khamenei's death has already triggered retaliatory attacks regionally and heightened tensions in the Middle East. Global oil markets and trade routes are facing disruptions. international leaders have expressed concern over escalating violence.

Khamenei's legacy is complex. It was based on a staunch defender of Iran's independence for some and an authoritarian figure for others. His death leaves the country and also the Middle East at a historic crossroads. The next steps are likely to reshape politics, security and regional alliances.

Clinton Denies Wrongdoing in Epstein Case — But Bigger Questions Remain

Closed-door deposition of former US President Bill Clinton before the House Oversight Committee may have lasted hours. However, its political and moral implications will linger far longer period of time. Firm declaration of Clinton that he saw nothing and did nothing wrong in relation to disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein is a legal defense as well as a reflection of how power, proximity and perception collide in high-profile investigations.

Clinton insisted he had no knowledge of sex-trafficking crimes of Epstein. He said would have turned him in if he had known. He emphasized that appearing in Justice Department files or photographs does not means implying misconduct. This may be correct in legal terms, but association is not a guilt.

Timing of the deposition highlights how politically charged the investigation has become. It was just one day after former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton also denied knowledge of crimes by Epstein.

Republican Chairman James Comer called the session productive. Democrats meanwhile pointed to testimony that they say warrants questioning President Donald Trump. The Epstein files in other words have become a search for truth and even a political chessboard.

This is where the editorial lens matters. The real issue is not whether a former president appears in documents or photos. The real issue is how Epstein was able to cultivate relationships with politicians, celebrities and business leaders.

Real Risks Behind Trump's Iran Conflict

A recent opinion piece published in The New York Times questions whether President Donald Trump has fully calculated the long-term consequences of escalating tensions with Iran. The administration frames military action as a move to deter nuclear as well as regional threats, but critics argue the other way that strategy lacks clarity and of course the congressional backing.

The conflict risks drawing United States into another prolonged Middle East crisis. Supporters argue that strong action restores deterrence and reinforces ties with Israel and other allies. Opponents meanwhile counter that escalation could destabilize the region without a defined endgame. It is to strain U.S. alliances and increase economic uncertainty at home as well.

Public skepticism is simultaneously growing and particularly among voters who are wary of new foreign wars. There is a central question and it is whether Iran poses challenges. Of course, it does. Well, whether military escalation is the smartest path forward. The conflict could become a defining and costly chapter of Trump's presidency if Washington cannot clearly define its objectives and exit strategy.

Why UK's Weather Is Swinging Between Extremes

Growing Impact of Floods and Heatwaves Across UK

UK is experiencing a sharp shift in weather patterns. The nation is experiencing from scorching summers to relentlessly wet winters. Experts argue that it could be climate whiplash and it is defined as a term that describes rapid swings between extreme weather events including drought and flooding. Such experiences were once felt unusual, but it is fast becoming the new normal.

Parts of the UK have faced prolonged periods of heavy rainfall and flooding as well after record-breaking heatwaves and drought conditions in recent summers. The sudden transitions are not random. A warming atmosphere holds more moisture and this makes rainfall more intense. Shifting jet stream patterns can lock the country into extended dry or wet spells. Climate change is amplifying both extremes.

The consequences are serious. Infrastructure built for historical averages is struggling to cope with repeated floods and repeated heat stress. Farmers face waterlogged fields one season and thereafter dry soil in the next season. Insurance costs in flood-prone areas are of course rising. Public health systems are simultaneously also under pressure and this is due to heatwaves becoming more frequent as well as more dangerous.

Bigger concern is preparedness. UK climate policies have traditionally focused on gradual change. The policies have not focused on rapid seasonal swings. Climate whiplash now demands flexible planning such as smarter water management, stronger flood defences, heat-resilient cities and of course forward-looking infrastructure investment.

Message is very clear. The UK must adapt warmer temperatures and simultaneously sharper as well as more unpredictable weather extremes. Climate whiplash is now not just a warning, but it is already here.

Australia's Victoria Moves to Make Remote Work a Legal Right

Victoria's remote work reform signals a major shift in Australia's workplace policies

It is a landmark move for workplace reform. The Australian state of Victoria now plans to give employees a legal right to work from home. The right is for up to two days a week. The proposed law is set to take effect from September 1. It is to amend Equal Opportunity framework to protect workers seeking remote work arrangements.

Premier Jacinta Allan says the reform aims to boost work-life balance. It is to increase workforce participation and support parents as well as carers. The policy reflects how flexible work became mainstream after COVID-19 pandemic. It signals that remote work is no more a corporate perk, but it is potentially a legal entitlement.

However, business groups have raised concerns about compliance challenges. The challenges mainly for small firms. They argue that flexibility should remain an employer-led decision and not a government mandate.

The bold proposal could reshape Australia's workplace laws and set a precedent globally. However, debates around hybrid work, productivity and employee rights are to intensify further.

PRSI Kolkata Marks International Women's Day at ICCR

Launches Third Edition of 'Janasanjog' Magazine

Kolkata, March 7, 2026: Kolkata Chapter of the Public Relations Society of India (PRSI) marked International Women's Day with a special programme at the Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR). The event brought together public relations professionals, media representatives and distinguished guests to celebrate women's leadership as well as professional achievements.

PRSI is a premier body for public relations and communication professionals in India. It has played a significant role in promoting ethical communication practices, professional development and industry dialogue across the country. The Kolkata Chapter is one of its most active chapters equipped with regularity in organising industry interactions, training programmes and knowledge initiatives for communication professionals as well.

The event began with a welcome address by Aninda Das, vice-chairman of PRSI Kolkata Chapter. He underlined importance of recognising such women who have made significant contributions in the society through leadership, creativity and professional excellence.

Chief guest Rita Das spoke about growing role of women in leadership across sectors. She stressed on the need of building inclusive institutions to support equal opportunities

A key highlight of the evening was launch of third edition of in-house magazine Janasanjog of PRSI Kolkata Chapter. Editor Ankita Bhattacharya said the publication aims at strengthening dialogue around public relations and its evolving connection with other professional domains.

The programme simultaneously featured conversation between Soumyajit Mahapatra, chairman of PRSI Kolkata Chapter, and Sydney-based actress Saroni Roy. The segment offered insights into communication, media and global cultural engagement.

Sumit Agarwal, Election Commission of India (ECI) icon and NITI Aayog SDG-DEI ambassador, delivered keynote address on "Responsible Leadership." He emphasised on ethical communication, social responsibility and inclusive growth.

PRSI Kolkata also honoured several women for their contributions in various fields. The awardees were Ankita Bhattacharya, Antara Chakraborty, Chitralekha Bandyopadhyay, Reshmi Chatterjee, Shalini Mukherjee, Shreya Mondal and Yasmin Khatun.

The programme concluded with an open discussion and a formal vote of thanks. It reaffirmed commitment of PRSI Kolkata in strengthening public relations profession while encouraging inclusive leadership and social responsibility.

Young Students Shine at Adamas International School's Samsara Event

Kolkata, February 6, 2026: Adamas International School in Belgharia hosted a colourful cultural programme Samsara. It was presented by students of Classes I and II of the school. The event brought together music, dance and creative performances to celebrate cultures, diversity as well as human connections. It highlighted importance of experiential learning in early education.

The programme was attended by Ashida Katsunori, Deputy Consul General of Japan in Kolkata. His presence added an international dimension to the occasion as he is known for promoting Japanese culture through music and culinary arts. His participation reflected broader theme of cultural understanding and exchange of the event.

The young students showcased stories of harmony, diversity and shared heritage through a series of well-coordinated performances. Their confident stage presence and expressive acts received warm appreciation from parents, teachers and invited guests as well.

Samit Ray, Chancellor of Adamas University, emphasised that education should go beyond textbooks and classrooms. He noted that programmes like Samsara help in developing empathy, creativity and cultural awareness among children. He added that such events shape the students in becoming responsible global citizens.

Mallika Ray, Director of Adamas University, highlighted importance of creative platforms in holistic child development. She said that children gain confidence, learn teamwork and develop respect for diverse traditions through such cultural activities.

Anusuya Paul, Principal of Adamas International School, added that the school focuses on experiential and activity-based learning. Adamas allows children to explore ideas, cultures and emotions through an engaging as well as joyful environment.

The event concluded on a celebratory note. Samsara reinforced role of cultural programmes in building confidence, creativity and cultural understanding among young learners.

Epstein Investigation and the Clintons
Transparency or Political Theatre?

The recent depositions of Bill Clinton and Hillary Clinton before the U.S. House Oversight Committee have once again pushed the long-running controversy surrounding Jeffrey Epstein back into the political spotlight. The couple testified in closed-door sessions in New York as part of a congressional investigation examining Epstein's connections with powerful figures. Both Clintons denied any knowledge of Epstein's criminal activities, with Hillary Clinton stating she never met him and Bill Clinton insisting he would have reported any wrongdoing had he known about it. While Republicans leading the probe argue that the inquiry is essential to uncover the extent of Epstein's elite network, Democrats claim it reflects partisan politics rather than a genuine search for truth. From an editorial perspective, the development underscores how the Epstein scandal continues to cast a long shadow over global politics, raising persistent questions about accountability, transparency, and how influential individuals interact with controversial figures long before their crimes fully come to light.

Why World Economic Forum Chief's Exit Highlights a Leadership Crisis After the Epstein Controversy

World Economic Forum Chief Steps Down After Epstein Controversy
Børge Brende Resigns Amid Scrutiny Over Past Ties to Jeffrey Epstein
WORLD ECONOMIC FORUM
DAVOS

The resignation of Børge Brende as President and CEO of the World Economic Forum following scrutiny over his past interactions with disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein highlights how reputational risks can quickly reshape leadership at major global institutions. Although an independent review reportedly found no new concerns beyond previously disclosed information, the renewed public attention placed pressure on the Geneva-based organisation best known for hosting the influential World Economic Forum Annual Meeting in Davos. In stepping down, Brende said he wanted the Forum to continue its work without distraction, a decision that reflects how even historical associations can challenge credibility in an era of heightened transparency and public scrutiny. His exit after nearly a decade in charge signals a significant leadership transition for the Forum and serves as a reminder that organisations shaping global economic and policy discussions must maintain not only influence but also strong ethical standards and accountability to retain public trust.

German Company Hettich Inaugurates Revamped Experience Centre in Kolkata

Kolkata, February 17, 2026: German furniture fittings brand Hettich inaugurated its revamped Experience Centre in Kolkata aiming to strengthen presence in Eastern India. The new facility was inaugurated by Andre Eckholt, Managing Director of Hettich India, SAARC, Middle East & Africa, along with Saroj Poddar, Chairman of Adventz Group and Hettich India.

The upgraded Experience Centre showcases latest interior solutions of the company such as advanced German furniture fittings, architectural door hardware, furniture lighting and built-in kitchen appliances. The centre is designed as an interactive space where homeowners, architects as well as interior designers can explore and experience innovations of Hettich firsthand.

Andre Eckholt said the new centre reflects "Built to Lead" philosophy of Hettich as the company celebrates 25 years of operations in the country. Saroj Poddar noted that the refreshed space is sure to strengthen engagement with customers and design professionals in the eastern region of India. It is also to support the growing demand for modern interior solutions.

The new centre is located at PS Maestro, 113 G, Matheswartala Road in Tangra. It also offers value-added services such as free design support and doorstep consultations. Hettich was founded 138 years ago in Germany. It is one of the leading manufacturers of furniture fittings in the world equipped with a global turnover of more than €1.5 billion. The company holds a strong presence in the Indian market too.

Meet Indian-Born Australian Model and Actor Saroni Roy

Saroni Roy is often described as a "multi-hyphenate" professional — actor, model, journalist, and social entrepreneur. Based in Sydney, she has worked across film, television, fashion, and public relations while also engaging in community initiatives.

Her career includes appearances in international screen productions and commercial campaigns, as well as collaborations with global brands in fashion and beauty.

Roy is also a cancer survivor and a strong advocate for body confidence and mental health awareness. Through her initiatives and public speaking engagements, she encourages greater acceptance and inclusion within society and the arts.

In addition, she founded the Saroni Roy Foundation, which focuses on diversity, sustainability, and social justice initiatives aimed at building a more inclusive global community.

Saroni Roy Foundation

Promoting Diversity, Sustainability and Social Impact

Indian-born Australian actor and model Saroni Roy has extended her influence beyond the entertainment industry through the Saroni Roy Foundation, an initiative focused on diversity, sustainability and social justice. The foundation works to support underrepresented voices and promote inclusive opportunities across communities.

Through the organisation, Roy advocates for greater representation in the arts, media and public life. The foundation's initiatives often focus on empowering women, supporting creative professionals from diverse cultural backgrounds, and encouraging conversations around equality and inclusion.

The platform also promotes environmental awareness and community engagement. By linking cultural expression with social responsibility, the foundation aims to encourage individuals and organisations to adopt more inclusive and sustainable practices.

Roy's efforts through the foundation highlight how artists can use their influence not only for creative pursuits but also for social change. Her work continues to position her as a voice for diversity and empowerment within Australia's multicultural landscape.

Saroni Roy's Work in Fashion and Screen Projects

Over the years, Saroni Roy has built a presence in both the fashion and entertainment industries in Australia. As a model, she has appeared in various fashion shows and campaigns, including participation in events linked to Australian Fashion Week, where she represented South Asian talent on an international stage.

Roy has also worked in screen productions, including independent films, television projects and digital content. Her training in screen acting in Sydney helped her transition from modelling into acting roles, allowing her to explore storytelling across different formats.

In addition to acting, Roy has been involved in media and journalism work, contributing to discussions on representation in the entertainment sector. Her creative career reflects a combination of performance, storytelling and advocacy.

By navigating multiple industries—from fashion runways to film sets—Roy has built a portfolio that reflects both artistic ambition and a commitment to increasing diversity within global media and entertainment.

Fall of El Mencho and Unending War on Drug Cartels

The killing of Nemesio Oseguera Cervantes, the powerful boss of the Jalisco New Generation Cartel (CJNG), was expected to be a major breakthrough in Mexico's war against drug cartels. Instead, it has once again revealed a harsh truth: removing a cartel leader does not necessarily end the violence.

El Mencho built CJNG into one of the most feared criminal organizations in the world, expanding its operations across Mexico and international drug markets. After his death during a military operation in the state of Jalisco, violence quickly erupted. Cartel members reportedly launched retaliatory attacks, blocking highways and clashing with security forces in several regions.

This reaction highlights a long-standing flaw in Mexico's anti-cartel strategy. Authorities have often relied on the "kingpin strategy," targeting cartel leaders in the hope that their organizations will collapse. In reality, cartels frequently adapt by appointing new leaders or splintering into rival factions, which can trigger even more violence.

The death of El Mencho may close one chapter in Mexico's struggle with organized crime, but it is unlikely to end the deeper problem. As long as powerful criminal networks continue to thrive on global drug demand and weak institutions, the cycle of cartel violence will persist.

Meet the Man Behind Bollywood's Music, Hollywood's Icons

Rahul B Seth - A Multi-Faceted Global Artist

RAHUL B SETH is a powerhouse with a portfolio spanning over 2,000 ad campaigns and a massive list of Bollywood credits. His work as a vocalist, lyricist, and composer features in hits like Baaghi, Yamla Pagla Deewana 1 & 2, Heroes, Vaada Raha, Hum Aapke Dil Mein Rehte Hain, & many more. Whether he is voicing for Hollywood icons like Will Smith or creating chart-topping festive tracks like the Hindi-Gujarati fusion "Chaalo Re Chaalo" & Holi song "Rangbaazi" both with Hamsika Iyer, Seth continues to redefine the boundaries of Indian music. His journey from the streets of Lucknow to the airwaves of the UK and USA remains a testament to the power of a truly international creative vision.

With Australian Actor Travis Jaffery

Lucknow to Lusaka to London

Global DNA of Modern Composer

The secret to Rahul B. Seth's unique musical signature lies in a journey that spans three continents. While his roots are firmly planted in the literary soil of Lucknow—descending from a lineage of poets and trailblazers—his creative awakening happened thousands of miles away in Lusaka, Zambia.

With Bollywood Actor Shah Rukh Khan

With Bollywood Megastar Dharmendra

Migrating to Africa at a very young age, Seth spent his formative years immersed in a completely different sonic landscape. By jamming with local musicians and mastering the African drums, he developed a "global ear" long before "World Music" became a trendy genre. This led him to specialize in Afro Rap, a unique vocal style he later fused with Indian melodies to create a signature "Afro-fusion" sound that caught the attention of Bollywood legends like Anu Malik.

This journey eventually came full circle in London, where his global perspective earned him the prestigious 'Bharat Gaurav Samman' Award at the House of Lords, UK Parliament. Standing in the heart of the UK, Seth performed his Global Anthem for World Peace—a song that has now been played in over 30 countries—at the Indian High Commission's Nehru Centre.

Rahul has been featured in a documentary film on Bollywood; produced by ARD TV Germany

With Bollywood Superstar Amitabh Bachchan

Official Hindi Voice of Will Smith

The greatest compliment in the world of voice acting today is being unrecognizable. Rahul B. Seth achieved it by becoming the official Hindi voice for Hollywood superstar Will Smith in the blockbuster I Am Legend. It was not merely a translation of words. In fact, it was a deep-dive into vocal architecture.

Seth said that his time in Africa gave a unique advantage in understanding specific "intonation" and "deep baritone" which were required to match the performance of Smith. He faced a similar challenge in Hollywood Director Christopher Nolan's Oscar winning cult classic "Batman- The Dark Knight" wherein he dubbed for actor Aaron Eckhart who played the iconic character of 'Harvey 2 Face' who starts off as a positive character and goes on to become a mean negative ruthless avenger, with a complete change of voice & body language.

A Similar case was director Shankar's film Jeans, starring Aishwarya Rai & Prashant. In it, he had to dub for two different versions of actor Prashant playing twins. He gave each twin a distinct tonality and expression as well. All such roles highlight a fundamental truth of the industry and it is that a voice actor is not just a narrator, but is a performer who must act through a microphone to get into the skin of a foreign performance & make it feel local. Other notable Hollywood actors Rahul has dubbed for are Colin Farrell, Don Cheadle, Tobias Menzies, Michael Shannon & more.
